The mission of the Center for Indian Community (CICD) is to provide assistance and resources to American Indian Nations, tribes, and communities in California, which are aimed at achieving self-determination and validation of their cultural values.

GOALS

I. To develop resources through partnerships with Indian tribes, communities, and organizations and Humboldt State University departments and programs.
   - The Center for Indian Community Development will identify and write three grant applications.
   - The Center for Indian Community Development will provide technical assistance on grant applications to ten American Indian clients.
   - The Center for Indian Community Development will assist Humboldt State University personnel with grant information and technical assistance.

II. Identify, develop, and maintain new and existing partnerships, both internal and external.
   - The Center for Indian Community Development will serve as a liaison between Humboldt State University and American Indian tribes, organizations, and communities through the Native American Advisory Committee.

III. Operate and manage a flexible program delivery system that is respectful of tribal and community life.
   - Collaborative events and activities with Tribes and/or organizations will include planning activities, conferences, workshops, and meetings.
   - Provide technical assistance and support to American Indian tribes, nations, organizations, and communities.
   - Develop an online cultural library resource.
   - Plan and produce tribal elders knowledge materials through video, web, and audio tapes.
IV. Develop and/or identify curricula that meet the changing circumstances of today’s American Indian tribes, nations, and communities.

- Develop and produce three American Indian language curriculum publications.

V. Communicate the value of the Center for Indian Community Development to internal and external markets.

- The Center for Indian Community Development will produce two newsletters.
- The Center for Indian Community Development will develop and produce public relations materials.
  - Update and develop CICD web page.
  - Revise, update, and produce information for CICD Fact Sheet.

VI. Develop and lead program staff through training, supervision, and evaluation that facilitates the operation and growth of the participants, clients, and programs.

- The Center for Indian Community Development will identify and attend sessions in technology, community development, grantsmanship, and American Indian and multi-cultural training.